

In 2009, seven Supreme Court justices visited 28 universities and law schools in the United States and three foreign universities in order to teach and to give speeches, according to their financial disclosure forms. The three foreign schools were the University of Cambridge (England), Lund University (Sweden) and the University of Copenhagen (Denmark). (Hat tip to TaxProf Blog.)

Schools receiving more than one visit

|                               |   |
|-------------------------------|---|
| University of Arizona         | 3 |
| New England School of Law     | 3 |
| Stanford University           | 3 |
| University of Oklahoma        | 2 |
| Duke University               | 2 |
| Ohio State University         | 2 |
| University of the Pacific     | 2 |
| Creighton University          | 2 |
| Washington and Lee University | 2 |

Justices' Visits and Teaching Fees

|                            |   |
|----------------------------|---|
| John Roberts Jr.    | Idaho ($11,500); New England ($15,000); Arizona; North Carolina Central; Louisville; Cambridge; Michigan; Stanford; Oklahoma          |
| Samuel Alito Jr.    | St. Mary's ($15,000); Duke ($11,550)  |
| Stephen Breyer      | Stanford; California-Berkeley; Chicago; Yale; Arizona; Yeshiva  |
| Ruth Bader Ginsburg | Loyola-Chicago ($6,000); Northwestern ($7,500); New England; Ohio State   |
| Anthony Kennedy     | Pacific; Lewis & Clark; Stanford; Oklahoma  |
| Antonin Scalia      | Duke ($2,500); Penn State ($10,000); San Diego ($7,500); Creighton; Lund; Ohio State; Pepperdine; Arizona; Copenhagen; William Carey |
| Clarence Thomas     | Creighton ($15,000); Alabama ($4,500); Washington & Lee; Minnesota; Southern Methodist  |