

The attorneys in Nixon Peabody LLP's Government Investigations & White Collar Defense practice are nationally recognized industry leaders who have experience handling all forms of government investigations—including criminal, administrative, and congressional investigations—as well as grand jury proceedings, trials, appeals, and collateral actions. Our practice includes a number of former federal prosecutors and trial-tested litigators who have handled many of the most prominent criminal matters in the country.

With government enforcement more aggressive today than ever before, it is essential for individuals and organizations to have guidance from skilled attorneys who know the process inside and out. Our attorneys help clients manage the most sensitive inquiries, often resolving matters quietly and without public attention. We also work collaboratively with clients to establish real-world compliance programs that can head off costly legal problems before they appear. When litigation is unavoidable, our clients are represented by highly skilled trial lawyers who have achieved favorable results for individuals and companies in some of the nation's largest and highest-profile civil and criminal proceedings.

We recently strengthened our extraordinary team by adding Edward C. O'Callaghan (eocallaghan@nixonpeabody.com). Ed spent nearly ten years as an Assistant United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, the last three as co-chief of the Terrorism & National Security Unit. He served as lead prosecutor on high-profile matters, including the Department of Justice's international financial fraud investigation and prosecutions related to corruption in the United Nations Oil-for-Food Program, RICO prosecutions of crime families, numerous bank and securities fraud cases, FCPA matters and export violations. Ed also served as a senior advisor for Senator John McCain's presidential campaign.
